EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

Posting is a specific form of temporary labour mobility, based on the freedom to provide services cross-border within the internal market. The 1996 Posting of Workers Directive defines a set of mandatory rules regarding the terms and conditions of employment to be applied to posted workers. Even though posted workers are employed by a sending company and thereby subject to the law of the 'sending' Member State, they are entitled to a set of core rights in force in the host Member State. This is to guarantee that these rights and working conditions are protected throughout the EU.

According to the Commission, in 2014, there were over 1.9 million postings in the EU, an increase of 10.3% as compared to 2013 and of 44.4% with respect to 2010. The construction sector accounts for 43.7% of the total number of postings, while posting is also significant in manufacturing, education and health services.

Since 1996, the economic and labour market situation in the European Union has changed considerably. Over the last two decades, the Single Market has grown and wage differences have increased.

Although posting is an integral part of the internal market, it can have unintended consequences for certain sectors and regions. According to the Commission, posted workers can earn up to 50% less than local workers in some sectors or Member States, which distorts the level-playing field between companies as well as workers.

In this light, and that of the numerous rulings on the interpretation of the current provisions by the European Court of Justice, the Commission has proposed a revision of the Posting of Workers Directive, which is complementary to the Enforcement Directive adopted in 2014.

The Enforcement Directive has focused mainly on strengthening the practical application and enforcement of the provisions of the 1996 Directive by addressing issues related to fraud and circumvention and improving the exchange of information between Member States. Unfortunately, to date not all Member States have transposed the Directive.

However, the Enforcement Directive does not address the more fundamental questions related to the 1996 framework, with regard to the hard core of working and employment conditions that posted workers can avail of.

The co-rapporteurs' draft report seeks to further build on the Commission's proposal and deliver an effective legal instrument for ensuring a level playing field in the cross-border provision of services, coupled with the sound social protection of posted workers.
